When was the last time you made a new friend? Not just some person you met at the grocery store or an officemate but a person you would call for a late night chat when you're having a bad time at work or in an emergency?

As people approach midlife, the days of fun and the thrill of exploration suddenly becomes dimmer. With a zap of the hand, you're no longer 18 and life doesn't seem to be one big party. You now work 50 hours a week to pay the bills, possibly a family and you start taking on more responsibilities and before you know it, you barely have time to socialize at all.

That is why, in this book, you will learn to redefine your social skills, regardless whether you're an introvert or an extrovert. You will learn how to start new friendships as well as how to maintain them. Let's get you started, let's get you some friends!

Here Is A Preview Of What You'll Learn...

- Unraveling your real self
- Leaving the best first impression
- Finding more good friends
- Standing for what you think is right
- Becoming a lighting guide
- Much, much more!
