The global fitness and health industry generates more than seventy-five billion U.S. dollars in revenue annually. Americans are spending their income on diet fads, expensive medications, and fitness equipment without considering the direct connection between their health and faith.

Faith and healing work together for good health.

In the light of these findings, Dr. Max Fleury states that readers should consider biblical Christianity as one of the best means to remain in good health, both physically and emotionally. To demonstrate the correlation between faith and healing, this teaching relies on a unique reference system combining theological sources with clinical studies. Readers will secure their trust in God for health and healing.
