Tina Greene's husband has gone missing while surfing off Maui and after eight months, there's little hope of a recovered body. She pulls herself from the wreckage of her life to rescue her failing SCUBA shop from bankruptcy. When an old lover, Jamey Dunn, walks in the shop after ten years, she panics to see him again. His promises once meant everything to her and then he disappeared from her life too. Is it any wonder she wants nothing to do with him when he shows up at her dive shop after ten years?

Jamey Dunn has spent a lifetime adjusting to what he's termed heightened intuition. That, and being able to enter people's dreams. When he arrives on Maui, on leave from his Special Forces Unit in Afghanistan, Jamey is under orders to give his abilities a break. Considering he uses telepathy for the military, he's now of little use in the war zone. Maui is where he hopes to regain his ability to enter dreams. When Jamey discovers Tina is still on Maui, he's distraught to find her a shell of the person he once loved. Compelled to help her, Jamey learns that Tina's otherworldly dreams are part of her problem and he might be the only person who can help her make sense of them. But when he reveals his secret ability to enter dreams and offers to enter her sub-conscious, she doesn't trust him. Working to gain her trust, Jamey knows he has to solve this mystery for Tina to absolve him in the role he played in the ruin of her life.
